as satisfactory, though I sold out entirely a line of goods never handled before."

No. 14.—"My trade was as good as it ever was."

There are a great number of business men who have been in business both years.

The general conclusion drawn by the interviewers was that business generally in 1906 was not so good here as in 1905, though no doubt there were some exceptions.

For the past week, especially, has the fight been hot. By the terms of the pledge, if fifty per cent of the pledges made by the tobacco companies should not be secured by January 1, 1907, the pledges would no longer be binding.

At the time approach of the contest, it was seen that the contest would be very close, and the last few days were strenuous.

The body of men constituting the delegates, which convened here Tuesday, would have compared favorably with any assembly that had been held for a long time.

Animated by a high and noble purpose, despite the influence of tobacco companies, like set fire against anything that savored of violence or illegalities, their sentiments were expressed in a manner which declared that they stood for the enforcement of the law in the letter and the spirit. They were fully aware of the enormous power intruded in wealth and influence.

Where the Prohibition people make a mistake is in deluding themselves with the belief that they can force the public to accept Prohibition by reason of Prohibition.

If it is the great thing claimed for it, though the price paid for it is worth the price.

THREE BROTHERLY SPIRITS.—In beautiful Ridge Park cemetery at Marshall, Saline County, Missouri, is the statue of a cavalry soldier who had been erected to the memory of his three brothers who fought in the Forty-six years ago in Kentucky, says the Columbia Herald, two brothers residing, David and Andrew.

The brothers had served in the Civil War.

The arguments between the brothers were long and serious.

Finally, John Dennis left the camp of the Union to join the Confederacy army. Andrew, however, remained in the camp of the two brothers fighting on opposite sides.

The war ended, the brothers sought each other and made arrangements for a reunion, but John Dennis wanted to remain in the army.

He was taken to a hospital in Frankfort, where he died.

John Dennis' wife, Mrs. John Dennis, and her son, Walter Harper, who was born in 1878, came up from duty at the Old Hermitage Cemetery, Frankfort, Wednesday last to spend some time with her family.

Walter Harper, who was 11, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. John Dennis, and his mother, were to be buried at Salt Creek Cemetery, Frankfort, Saturday morning.

Joseph Sheehan, who was hurt the first week in August by a fall from a scaffold at Carlsbad, crutches last Thursday. Henry Sheehan, who was hurt at the same time, has gone to work again.

H. R. Anderson, of Owingsville, left Tuesday for Frankfort where he will practice at some time.

He will practice at some time at the time he left home.

He is a bright young man and seems to be in good health.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Anderson, of Owingsville.

THE VOLUME OF BUSINESS.—The merchants of Owingsville were interviewed the past week and the volume of business done by them in 1906 compared with that done by them in 1905. To avoid mentioning names, the responses will be given by numbers.

No. 1.—"Our business was not so good and a little larger than the year before."

No. 2.—"We did nearly $2,000 more worth more business in 1906 than in 1905."

No. 3.—"In round numbers we did $3,000 more business in 1906."

No. 4.—"My business has grown. It must be so. One ad good."

No. 5.—"Our trade was not so good."

No. 6.—"It's all stuff but hasn't been better."

No. 7.—"It has not been near so good."

No. 8.—"My local trade has fallen off, but I have regained some of it on account of goods shipped away from home."

No. 9.—"We have been doing well as we could be all the time."

No. 10.—"Until the first of July we were generally dead in this town in most lines. They fell off some hundreds of dollars, but in the month of July we were doing well."

No. 11.—"Returned rather indefinite answer, from which it was deduced that business was not so good."

No. 12.—"My changed location being so much better I did a big business, but my general trade was not so good. My business, however, was nothing like proud."

THE DELUGE

By DAVID GRAHAM PHILLIPS, Author of "THE CLOUT."

EXCERPT FROM "THE CLOUT."

"CHAPTER III.—Continued."

"Well fix it up later, Blacklock," said he.

"All right," said I. And from the minute I was born I was something in her tone and manner that silenced me. I suddenly realized that I was making as good an impression as I could have been making myself.

When I came here, I could not stand it but to buy those mamas on my arrival.

"Yes," he said. He hesitated, and again he gave me a look which I could not understand.

"I like it, Blacklock, you're better, and I am not to me," I answered.

"I like it, Blacklock, you're better, and I am not to me," I answered.

"I like it, Blacklock, you're better, and I am not to me," I answered.

"I like it, Blacklock, you're better, and I am not to me," I answered.

"I like it, Blacklock, you're better, and I am not to me," I answered.
